

ABDURAGMAN ADAMS

FILM/TV/THEATRE

BIOGRAPHY

Abduragman Adams (also known as Abdu Adams) is an award-winning South African actor, director and drama lecturer. He has appeared in several television shows including Heartlines, Known Gods, Rugby Motors and Die Boland Moorde.

In 2015 he landed a starring role in the kykNET soap opera, Suidooster, set in Cape Town in the fictional suburb of Ruitersbosch. He also worked on 7de Laan, where he played the character of David Abrahams. He also starred in award-winning films such as Four Corners (2013) directed by Ian Gabriel and won a SAFTA award for best Supporting Actor in Daryne Joshua's feature film Noem My Skollie (2016).

His passion for performance extends into his work in various South African theatre productions. He also loves mentoring the next generation for the screen and stage and is the founding director of the Saturday Varsity Film Academy, which specialises in Acting Master Classes designed to make actors screen and set ready
