BIOGRAPHY

Kai Luke Brümmer is a South African-born actor. He began performing in theatre as a small child, in an old helicopter hanger that his mother had transformed into a theatre space. He also took ballet lessons and trained as a circus acrobat. Later his mother went to film school, and often took him with her to set. At the age of ten he became passionate about film.

After high school – where he participated in all forms of performance – and an interlude as ringmaster in Boswell Wilkie’s Circus, he enrolled at the University of Cape Town. He graduated with a BA (Honours) in Theatre and Performance, and was awarded a distinction in acting and the prize for best male actor.

In the relatively short time since finishing drama school Kai has performed in numerous stage productions, including Mike van Graan’s When Swallows Cry and The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time, for which he won a Naledi Award for best actor.

In mid-2019 he performed in Syfy Channel’s Vagrant Queen and Michael Colleary’s The Professionals.

In 2019 he starred in his first full-length feature film, Moffie, directed by Oliver Hermanus, which was invited to the 76th Venice Film Festival. Kai was named one of two best new up-and-comers at the festival by The Guardian.

Also in 2019, Moffie was chosen for the main competition at BFI (British Film Institute) London Film Festival.
